Young Men's Christian Association to Have an "All Nation's" Season.

CHINESE LEAD OFF THIS AFTERNOON

Dates Set for the Slour, the Scotchman and the Natives of Hindoostan-What May Be Looked for in Omaha Pulpits Today.

this week. This afternoon at 3:45 o'clock the Christian Chinese in the city will conduct the service for young men. Jung Chee Chan, now studying in the medical college, will speak, together with others. A chorus of fifteen Chinese will sing. Some Chinese musicians are to furnish part of the musical program, in addition to the association orchestra.

The following Sunday Sioux Indians speak February 17 the meeting will be under the charge of several natives of Hindoostan, assisted by Rev. Mr. Hopkins, formerly missionary. The next Sunday the service will be a great patriotic American service, ad-dressed by Americans.

Thursday evening, February 7, will be the beginning of the "Nights of Nations." Scotch night will be the first, on this date. llan Gordon is arranging the program, which will consist of Scotch songs, the Highland lling to bagpipe music, etc.

The classes in the gymnasium have been surprisingly large lately, crowding the floor, basket ball and circle tug being as popular with stately professional gentlemen and elergymen as with the "kids." Association foot ball takes well on Wednesday and Satarday at 4:30 p. m. on the Farnam street grounds. Skating at the park is to be popular, and ice polo, "shinney" and "hockey" are com-ing in for lively attention. Monday will be "Y. M. C. A. Night." Tuesday night the various young people's societies of the various young people's societies of the churches go skating. The park has 160,000 square feet of ice and every convenience. The Current Topic club discusses the amendments to the city charter at its next neeting. Councilman Howell will open the question. The debating society settles the question of capital punishment Tuesday night. Residence for the Bishop.

Rev. J. B. Priest of the South Tenth Street Methodist church says in the last number of the South Side Methodist: "Bishop Newman has gone from us to be absent for some months. We have a propo-sition to offer. It is this: During his ab-sence let some of the leading pastors and laymen set on foot a movement to secure a house in the city as a home for our resident bishop. On his return in the fall let the entire Methodism of the city turn out to hear one of his grand lectures—not for some one of the churches-but to purchase an episcopal residence. The general conference of 1896 will look over the field and see where our bishop should reside for the next four years. A house provided by Omaha Methodism may be the means of making his city a permanent home for some one of our bishops. Unless we do take this matter in hand we may lose our episcopal residence. Should we do this we believe that $2,000 could be secured for this purpose at one lecture, and by May, 1896, we might at one lecture, and by slay, 1500, we have be in a fair way to say to the general conference: 'If you will give us an episcopal residence we will find the house.'"

Monetary Science in Unity Club. The economic section of Unity club held an interesting meeting last Friday evening in the church lecture room. The director, Mr C. S. Lobingier, opened the evening with a review of the work of the last session, and "Gresham's Law and the Distribution of Money" was the subject of a paper by Mr. Alfred Pizey. Mr. Snow followed with a comprehensive paper on "Proand Its Effect on the Money Supply.' The discussion of the papers was partici-pated in by Prof. Lewis, Dr. Victor Rosewater, Mr. Snow, Mr. Stebbins, Mr. Wallace

The next meeting of this section occurs February 22. Subject: "The Two Standards," continued. "Bimetallism" is the specific for discussion.

A NEW DRINK. Known as the "Boston Bamboo," Which

Has Welcome Tonic Effects. Anything in the shape of a before dinne appetizer that will ameliorate the deleterious effects of the insidious cocktail must certainly be welcomed as a most desirable newcomer. The drink known as the Beston bamboo can, according to the New York World, claim all these advantages.

It is a certain stomachic, unquestionable in its tonic effects, and, so far as can be discovered, harmless as a beverage. The Boston bamboo is an equal mixture of sherry and Italian vermouth. The vermouth detracts from the softness of the wine, while the sherry counteracts the acridness of the bitters. It might be claimed that vermouth itself is but a partially disgusted form of absinthe, but this is not the case. All the poisonous qualities of absinthe are absent in well concocted vermouth, although they are both manufactured from the same mother wormwood. There is almost the same proportion of alcohol in vermouth as there is in tell you that he fails to get the old familiar sought-after effect from the yellow wine of Turin that he never fails to obtain from the green demon of the Gaul. Cocktail drinkers should welcome the Bos-on bamboo, for the reason that, although hey cannot get from it the same suspension of thought attributed to a distillation of rye, there is no doubt as to its efficacy as a stomachic tenic and an appetizer.

When he had finished the simple ballad many aged men of the Century were in tears, brought on by laughter. Be-fore Mr. Damrosch could begin his encore a club member, disguised as Dr. Parkhurst, came out and said: "Unless this show is made more indecent it must stop." Then a man who imitated Anthony Comstock climbed upon the stage, announced that he was Anthony Comstock, and that he would not allow such a heartless parody upon a mnister of the gospel. The beauty of this disguise was apparent when a member of completely taken in by the good acting of the indignant Comstock. He rose in his place in the audience, declared that it was a private club, could do what it pleased, and wanted no suggestions or rebukes from outsiders. The indignant judge was soothed. Mr. Damrosch sang his encore, and the show progressed.

Pot thes for Penholders.
"It is surprising," says a commercial traveler to the New York Tribune, "how general the use of potatoes as penholders is becoming in hotels. I have seen them in use in great hostelries of the east, whose owners wouldn't hesitate for a moment to spend $10 for a desk ornament to hold pens used by the guests in registering. The mixture of starch, glucose and water in the potato seems well adapted to take up the interpretation of ink, and to keep the pen point clear and bright, while the alkaloid of the potato, known as solanine, doubtless has omething to do with it in the same line. These elements readily take up the tannate of iron, which is the body substance of ink. Chemically speaking, starch is the first base of a potato, and sugar, or glucese, is its second base. Thus is the humble potate finding another way in which to serve the uses of mankind. There is a rather pleasing suggestiveness in a big ten-inch potato when a fellow comes in tired and hungry

Captain Barrows Recites His Experience While in an Atlantic Fog.

NOT PLEASANT TO BE IN A SH PWRECK

While Returning from Europe an Inmay Liner and an Austrian Bark Came Together, Nearly Wrecking

Both Vessels.

Anent the sinking of the North German Lloyd steamship, Elbe, in the North Sea, off the Holland coast last week, Mr. B. H. Barrows of the Union Pacific talked interestingly of a close call he had while crossing from Liverpool to New York. Mr. Barrows, while United States cansul at Dublin, made his only, visit home during ten years of service in May, 1881, sailing on the old transatlantic liner, the City of Berlin, and while off the banks of Newfoundland the steamer came very near being subjected to the same fate that came to the Elbe.

Speaking of the occurrence, the ex-consul-said:

"We sailed from Liverpool on May 12, 1881, n the old City of Berlin, of the famous Inman line, a steamer of 5,500 tons, commanded by Captain James Kennedy, commodore of the Inman fleet. The saloon list of passengers was unusually large for that season of the year, westward bound. At Liverpool we took on 400 or 500 steerage passengers, and as many more at Cork. I never have been able to ascertain with certainty the number of people on the Berlin that trip, but I was led to believe afterward, from conversation I heard on ship board, that there were certainly, with the officers, crew, saloon passengers and steerage, over ,200 souls on the vessel. "The voyage was uneventful, beautiful weather and smooth sea, and we had nothing worthy of note until we plunged into the fog-enveloped banks of Newfoundland. We were about three days distant from New York then. The fog was so dense that the lookout of the bow of the ship could not be seen from the bridge of the promenade deck. It rolled over the vessel like huge waves of cotton. Our foghern was going every half minute, the most dismal sound one hears at sea. Every attention was paid and the greatest care taken to prevent any acci-dent or collision. All through the night this doleful music was kept up and continued during the next forencon A NARROW ESCAPE.

"I was the first man on deck from the saloon after lunch, at 1 o'clock, and had just passed around the port side of the ship on the promenade deck when I heard the lookout sing out, and saw the officers on the bridge run to the starboard side of the ship. Stooping down and looking under the bridge I saw what seemed to me through an occa-sional rift in the mist, a gigantic ship lift out of the enveloping fog. I do not know how far away she was, and probably never will know, but I heard Captain Kennedy, order 'hard aport.' The vessel was a three-masted Austrian, 1,500 tons, loaded with heavy deals, from Maine. Instead of star-boarding the captain of the Austrian lost his head and ported, holding hard stem onto us, and if he had struck us he would have cut us open right over the boilers. When Captain Kennedy saw this was likely to happen he sang out 'starboard hard,' and he told me afterwards his reason was that, if he struck the bloody fool he would strike him hard and not hurt the Berlin.' The Austrian saw his intention and starboarded, and immediately.

Captain Kennedy ported, and we whizzed by the great sailing vessel, cutting her bowsprit off close to her nose, and as she went rushing by the heavy piece of timber ripped up the brass railings all down the starboard side of the Berlin, carrying away, two of the afterdavits, and left a mass of salls and rigging on our deck, but never grazed the hull of the big steamship. It was little probably from a sailor's standpoint. But my greatest scare was to see the steerage passengers come tumbling and trying to climb on promenade deck, shouting that 'she was sinkng; that we were sure to go down.' saloon passengers were more collected, but badly scared. One lady nearly frantic was looking for her daughter, who had left the table and was in the forward saloon. A clergyman who followed me close on deck and saw the accident was as badly scared as a nanly man could well be, and after devoutly, returning thanks, as I believe he d'd by his actions, he got away with the largest dose of brandy I ever saw taken in before or since by any sky pilot of any denomination, and he seemed spiritually the better for it.

DREW THE MORAL. "The moral of this event began to occur to ne when the captain ordered the first officer, o lower a boat and put off to see if we had one the Austrian any harm. Thirty-five minites by the watch from the time the order was given the officers and crew got into that beat. It occurred to me that if we had been struck fair and square, with any even show, for keeping affoat for a while, what percentum of chance we had for life laid in ten boats, 1,200 people to occupy them, considering the time it took to get into the water. That frightened me more than the accident.

"The chain bolts, and the davits on which the boat rested, were rusty, as I could see when she was lifted cut and swung over. I do not believe the boat had been in the water, for years, and this in spite of fire and acci-dent drill, which was carried out on certain days of the week on the steamer.

"The Austrian was not much damaged. No harm done to his hull, and, like a prudent German, he had a spare bowsprit in his hold, so we put the ship on her course and sailed away for New York, where we arrive! without anything further eventful transp'r ng. "The sharp, lightning-like quickness of this neident, as it moved so rapidly, left an im-

loaded down with a full and overcompliment effaceable impression on my mind and gave me once for all, in one flash, thorough appreclation of what might occur if a big steamer,
